

Mercedes Díez Prados

Universidad de Alcalá

Hacia una integración de enfoques para el estudio del discurso

ABSTRACT: The aim of the present article is proposing an integration of approaches to study discourse through the application of a layered analysis. Each layer of analysis addresses different dimensions of the text, so that textual and contextual parameters are determined. Previous to the account of this integrative model, a succinct revision of the history of discourse analysis and the schools and models that integrate it is carried out. This revision is intended as a frame of reference from which the model developed is derived. Of the different approaches to discourse that specialists recognize, this proposal combines insights from the Ethnography of Speaking, Halliday's Systemic-Functional Grammar, Text Linguistics, Schema Theory, Register and Genre Theory, Critical Discourse Analysis and Critical Linguistics.